DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1-6, 8-9, 12, and 14-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claims lack a tangible result.

The examiner and the attorney have worked to resolve this issue in the past. Unfortunately, the office did not concur with the examiner's suggested language. The examiner apologizes for the confusion. The following suggested claim language has been approved by the "101 help panel" so that this issue will not arise again.

Claim 1 (currently amended): A machine-implemented inventory planning method, comprising

Computing and generating an optimal safety stock level record for a product ...

Claim 9 (currently amended): A machine-implemented inventory planning method, comprising

Computing and generating an optimal safety stock level record ...

This claim language mirrors the claim language of AT&T Corp v. Excel

"generating a message record for ..."

So there will be no question on the claims meeting the 101 requirement.

Art Unit: 3627

In addition, it is clear from figures 5 and 6 that a record of the optimal safety stock level is generated, thus meeting the enablement requirement.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1-6, 8-9, 12, and 14-21 would be allowable if rewritten to overcome the 101 rejection.

Claim 1 recites that the safety stock is directly calculated from specific parameter values. One of the values is "a value of a cost of obtaining the product from one or more spot market sources". A spot market is a market where products can be obtained with zero lead-time. The prior art, such as Brinkley, considers if products can be obtained in a spot-market, but falls way short of showing that an actual value of the cost of obtaining the product in this manner is directly used in a calculation of safety stock.

Claim 9 recites the subject matter stated in a previous office action, 6/2/06, to be allowable subject matter.

Claims 2-6, 8, 12, and 14-21 are dependent upon claims 1 and 9.
